- How did your test results compare to your understanding of yourself?

It was pretty interesting and insightful to see how accurate this test was. I have taken similar test before and coincidentally it says the same. I can recognize I am very passionate on everything I do and caring towards others.

One interesting this is that this test helped to realize the way I learn most efficiently and this is through feelings and creativity. Also, it shown the way I remember things is with the associating it with how it made me feel when it happened. Interesting stuff.

- Do you disagree with any aspects of your quiz results?

My disagreement is with the career choices that are most incline to my personality type. INFJ are more gear towards Humanities and Health Care, even the fact I work in the Health field as an office manager. It proves how accurate this test is and I am going towards the opposite of what my personality is most comfortable with (Base on this test). But, my passion for creating and developing application out of a thought is mind blowing to me in an awesome. That's why I disagree with this part of the results.

- How can you use this information (or your own previous understanding of your personality and work ethic) to influence how you work in teams with others?

This information proves me that I am the implementor of a group. Meaning, I can easily put together a plan for our group for focus in order to get the job done. It's comes natural to me to be the peace maker and make sure that everybody is happy.
